If we are to build our future on firm ground, we need to learn to maintain social, cultural, and economic well-being without depleting natural resources or overloading nature's delicate balance. It is the role of education and training to ensure that citizens of all ages have the knowledge, skills, readiness and vision that will enable them to build a sustainable and equitable future and commit to a sustainable way of life. It is a demanding role that will require that firm support be given to teachers, trainers and educators.
